

THE SPIRIT OF ACHIEVEMENT

"The reality is that leadership intuition is often the factor that separates the greatest leaders from the merely good ones." (John C Maxwell)

The lives of many great achievers are widely documented, telling of their achievements. I do not believe that these people achieved great results simply because they knew how to carry out certain instructions as already outlined in this book and many others. They operated via a significant inner being within their souls, and this cannot be easily described to the uninitiated.

I refer to this as the spirit of achievement. This is an inner working where people have been gifted or developed an alert sensitivity that is able to take instructions from sources beyond their consciousness. Napoleon Hill attempts to define this in his thirteenth principle of 'Think and Grow Rich' as the 'sixth sense'.

The spirit of achievement causes you to take steps that raise you above the crowd. This spirit has a personality and helps you to live with a purposeful mindset to honour God and bless humanity. The view above the crowd is a totally different picture from that which you perceive when you are amongst the crowd...

You may wish to study the lives of some great achievers to be able to gain insight into the spirit behind their achievement. It is not enough to merely read about them, as recognition of the spirit they carry may cause the practical dreamer to yearn for this spirit which knows no weariness.

Sometimes these people see physical progress, and often times nothing is seen, but the practical dreamer with a spirit of achievement looks forward to a better tomorrow, where he will see a realisation of his heart's yearnings. The invaluable results of the relationship with the spirit of achievement are attained by practice, persistent obedience and cooperation. For once you have learned to recognise the instructions advised by the spirit of achievement and obey them, association and clarity of communication is better achieved.
